non's Christians should now be made to understand that they could not expect outside help for Mr. Chamoun's "suicidal dream" of partitioning Lebanon in order to set up an independent Christian state, he warned.

While not optimistic about a solution, Mr. de Guiringaud said that, if the Christians renounced Chamoun's "unattainable" goals, Syria could be persuaded to start withdrawing its troops and talks could begin with the Lebanese Moslems. Other Christian leaders, including militia chief Pierre Gemayel, appeared to be open to this, he said. However, Syrian troops would stay in Lebanon as long as they feared another attack by the Chris-tian militias, Mr. de Guiringaud said. But he did not believe Syria sought to annex Lebanese territory. Arab diplomats meeting in Lebanon are seeking a formula to sta-tion Sudanese, Saudi Arabian or other more neutral Arab troops opposite the Christian militias, he said. If Christian extremisis abandon their "partition battle, which has lost the support of the Chris-tian population," the fighting could be ended. The government's authority could then be restored by a Lehanese army "whose command would not be entirely Christian, as it is now," be said.

Cracow's Wojtyla Is John Paul II

By Henry Tanner

ROME, Oct. 16 (NYT) - Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Poland tonight became the first non-Italian in 455 years to be elected head of the Roman Catholic Church and successor to Saint Peter. Prince of the Apostles. He assumed the name of John Paul II in homage to his predecessor,

Pope John Paul I, who died on Sept. 28 after a reign of only 33 days. The name combines the names of Pope John XXIII and Paul VI, the two predecessors of John Paul I. The election of a non-Italian from a Communist country of Eastern Europe came as a complete surprise and is expected to have a political impact of historic dimensions that cannot yet be fully gauged. The pape is 58, the youngest man to be elected in this century. His name had not been mentioned even as a dark horse candidate in the speculation among prelates and Vatican specialists before the secret conclave began on Friday.

Smoke Signals News

White smoke curling from a flue on the roof of the Sistine Chapel at 6:17 p.m. local time signalled to the world and to tens of thousands of onlookers massed in Saint Peter's Square that the pope had been elected.

Minutes later the traditional Latin phrase, "Nuntio vobis gaudium magnum: Habemus paparn," was called out from a balcony of Saint Peter's Basilica by Cardinal Pericle Felici, the ranking cardinal deacon. The phrase means "I announce to you a great joy: we have a pope."

The crowd in the huge floodlit square below broke into cheers There was new cheering and waving when the new pontiff, already wearing the white pontifical vestments with a fold emhroidered purple cape and stole, appeared on the central balcony of the basilica to impart for the first time his blessing, "Urbi et orbi" — "To the city [of Rome] and to the world."

Before reading the Latin benediction, the new pope, a tall solidly huilt man, addressed the crowd in almost accent-free Italian. "I was afraid to accept this appointment, but I did so in the spirit of obedience to our Lord and in total faith toward his mother, the Holy shooting. Two months earlier off the coast of Sabah in east Malaysia, a boat suddenly opened fire and gave chase to a pleasure sloop owned by a German couple. The couple and their 5-year-old son were overtaken and they surrendered. The yacht was boarded by Filipinos and put in tow. Without explanation, the pirates later cut the sloop loose and fled.

"I'll probably write about this voyage although few people in Europe will believe that there are still pirates around," the German man said bureaus show that piracy has been eradicated or largely suppressed in the waters off China, Hong Kong, Indonesia. Taiwan, Vietnam and Burma. For centuries pirates preyed on rich traders, many of them Chinese, in these waters. Piracy sometimes stemmed from a protection tax levied by local strongmen on ships entering their ports or passing through waterways. Today, newspapers in Malaysia report at least one incident of piracy every two weeks. In the Malacca Straits, piracy is usually hlamed on Thais who prey on Malaysian fishermen and seize their boats, nets and catch. Victims are rarely killed and some fishermen carry valuables on board - cartons of cigarettes, canned food and money - to offer as tribute. Ransom, as much as $2,000, is sometimes paid by the fishermen to get hack their boats and nets. Piracy in the Philippines is concentrated in the south. It is believed to be related to the Moslem insurgency and to smuggling which thrives there. The smugglers, mostly Filipinos who hring luxury items in motorized numphoats from Sabah, maintain an uneasy co-existence with the pirates, and fighting occasionally hreaks out between

The Philippine Coast Guard reports a significant problem in Manila Bay, where pirates approach anchored cargo ships and, taking advantage of skeleton crews, pilfer goods waiting to be unloaded.

Ships in Singapore harbor, the world's fourth busiest port, are occasionally raided by pirates. But police generally regard these attacks as minor. Thailand reported 200 cases of piracy last year. About half were near the Cambodian border. The government has mounted a fairly effective operation against the pirates and the number of incidents this year has dropped. Fishermen here, however, complain that there are still too few government patrol boats to protect them.

Thongkod Chaisiri, 28, a fisherman here, said 10 of his friends have been killed by pirates and in most of his seven encounters with pirate he had to cut off valuable nets in order to the pirates invariably operate nt night when most of the fleet is fishing. The pirates, mostly in boats converted from fishing trawlers, attack the smaller craft. Police say they are normally after the boats, which they take across the Gulf of Siam to southern Thailand or Malaysia to sell.

Thai authorities believe there is collusion between the pirates and Cambodians: the pirates providing some needed goods to the Cambodians in exchange for protection. Much of the piracy reportedly occurs in Cambodian waters, where Thais illegally harvest the rich fishing grounds.

Marine police said that many of the pirates hide on Thai islands near the frontier. One of the islands, also a haven for smugglers doing husiness with Cambodia, has a place called Pi-

U.S. Asks Smith Coalition to Discuss All-Party Parley

The Carter administration an-Prime Minister Ian Smith and his black colleagues to new talks here on the possibilty of a conference with guerrilla leaders to decide Rhodesia's future.

The action was based on Mr. Smith's statement to members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last Thursday that he was prepared to meet with guerrilla leaders "with no preconditions," said Thomas Reston, a State Department spokesman.

Britain and U.S. specialists on Africa will attend the talks, to be held here toward the end of the week, "for a further exploration" of the views of Mr. Smith and his hlack co-leaders. Mr. Reston said.

An all-parties conference, one including leaders of the Patriotic Front as well as the government in Salisbury, has long been an objective of the Carter administration.

Administration View

Administration officials have insisted that civil war can be averted only by having Mr. Smitb sit down with Josbua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front, who have been waging guer-rilla war against Rhodesia from bases in Mozambique and Zambia.

But it is far from clear whether Mr. Nkomo and Mr. Mugahe are prepared to meet with Mr. Smith prepared to meet with Mr. Smith the capital, where demonstrators and the three black moderates who attacked banks and other huildings.

It eventually was enacted and has become a crucial achievement of Vatican II, the statement known hy the first two words of its Latin text as "Dignitatis Ilumanae" (of human dignity).

The arcbhishop of Cracow also backed other liberal reforms at Vatican II, and opposed a conservative movement of prelates who wanted adoption of a sterm condemnation of atheism. It was not the cburch's task to appear authoritarian toward non-believers, the archbishop said in the name of the Polisb hierarchy. Since Varican II, the future pontiff - Pope Paul VI gave him the red hat of a cardinal in 1967 -has returned to Rome often. He served as a member of the Vatican's departments for divine worship, for the clergy, and for Catholic education, and as a member of the Bishops' Synod, a consultative body chosen by the pope from the international hierarchy.

During synod debates at the Vatican, the archbishop of Cracow in-sisted that the recommendations of Vatican II for "collegiality," meaning church government jointly by the pontiff and the hiships, must be fully carried out.

Priests and prelates, Italians and foreigners here, were debating tonight whether the first non-Italian pope in 455 years and the first Pol-ish pontiff in church history would be able to hold his own against the Italian-dominated curia.

Churchmen and diplomats who are familiar with the personality and career of the new pope suggested that as head of a vast archdiocese in a Communist-governed country, he has shown the qualities that he would need most for the central government of the church — tact, flexibility, adminis-trative skill, and firmness.

Stand Stiffens

At times, the government of Communist Party leader Edward Gierek seemed to prefer dealing with the 58-year-old archbisbop of Cracow rather than with the ag-gressive primate of Poland, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, who is 77. But lately, the new pope has sounded as uncompromising in his comments on state-church relations in Poland and other Communist-ruled nations, and on Marxism in the world, as the aged primate.

Carter Praises Work of 95th Congress

ences, President Carter said yester-day that the record of accomplishment of the 95th Congress is "uo-matched in more than a decade."

Mr. Carter, who flew to Camp David yesterday for a few days of rest, issued an exuberant statement that was all praise and oo reservations, although some of the legislation, ootably that on energy and taxes, fell far short of his requests.

"The American people can be justly proud of the work this Congress has done in solving some of the natioo's most pressing problems," he said.

In an earlier statement, he cautioned that there would be no

"overnight miracles."
Mr. Carter also described passage of the long-stalled National Energy Act as the "most important achievement" of the Congress. He said the legislation "will give our nation the tools we oeed to start down the road away from excessive dependence on foreign oil.

'National Security' "The act," he said, "will protect our consumers and producers, enhance our national security and re-move one of the most pressing causes of inflation and economic instability."

Mr. Carter did not mention the compromise $18.6 billion tax-cut bill, but his advisers made it clear that it is within the budget ballpark and that he probably will sign it. Only a few months ago, Mr. Carter was severely criticizing Congress for budget busting. But in his statement yesterday, he praised Congress for showing "an awareness of the urgent problem of inflation" and "demonstration its constant.

U.S. Disapproval Is Expected

Argentina Will Reprocess Plutonium

By Milton R. Benjamin

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 16 (WP) The president of Argentina's Atomic Energy Commission, Adm. Raul Castro Madero, has disclosed that Argentina is about to start construction of an experimental plutonium reprocessing plant.

The decision is certain to dismay the Carter administration, which has sought to curb the spread of reprocessing plants because the plutonium they produce can be used to make nuclear weapons.

Adm. Castro said that the reprocessing plant, which will be built at the Ezeiza atomic center just outside of Buenos Aires, probably would be completed in the early

This suggests that Argentina, the Latin American leader in ouclear technology, is likely to have its ex-perimental facility in operation at least five years ahead of Brazil, which is scheduled to start building which is scheduled to start building a laboratory-scale plant with West German aid in 1985.

Moreover, the Carter administration, which unsuccessfully mounted a major effort to halt the Brazilian deal is unlikely to have much succession. deal, is unlikely to have much success in changing Argentina's plans, because Argentina does not intend to seek outside assistance.

"It will be done entirely nationally," Adm. Castro said. "It is difficult have a seek think lead cult, but we have a very high level of scientists and professionals, so we think we will be able to build our own without any help."

Informed foreign observers take this cootention very seriously be-cause Argentine scientists and engineers built a laboratory-scale reprocessing plant at Ezeiza in the 1960s.

Adm. Castro said that this facili-ty reprocessed some plutonium be-fore it was dismantled in the early 1970s. Argentine sources said that the fuel that was reprocessed in the first Ezeiza plant came from the research reactor at the Constituyentes atomic center, also on the outskirts of Buenos Aires.

While Argentina has refused to sign the ouclear conproliferation treaty, contending that it discriminates against the con-weapon states, all of Argentina's nuclear facilities are under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards. This is because Argentina's three nuclear research reactors, although designed and built locally, are fueled with enriched uranium sup-plied by the United States, which will only provide it to safeguarded facilities. The Atucha nuclear pow-er plant — which in 1974 became the first and still the only operating ouclear power station in Latin - also is under safeguards.

"We are de facto full-scope safeguards," Adm. Castro said. "When in the future we build a reprocessing plant, that will also be under safeguards from the very moment fuel — from either the research reactors or Atucha -- comes in, because all fuel elements are under safeguards and they carry the safeguards along with them."

Despite this pledge, the Carter administration is certain to refuse to allow even minute quantities of the enriched uranium that the United States supplies for the research reactors to be reprocessed at

Argentina, bowever, is working to achieve independence from foreign suppliers by striving to produce all of the materials needed to operate natural-uranium reactors. A factory is under construction at Ezeiza that will fabricate the fuel elements occded to operate Atticha from the natural uranium present in large quantities in Argentina.

part of next year, we will start fa-brication on an industrial scale," Adm. Castro said.

Argentina also plans to start coostruction within the next month of an experimental heavy water plant, which is expected to go into operation in 1980 and produce two or three tons a year.

"Once we achieve all the know-"Once we achieve all the know-how, we will be in a positiou to ask for bids for an industrial plant — 250 tons." Adm. Castro said. The United States and other ma-jor supplier nations also have been trying in recent years to halt the spread of beavy-water technology, which is regarded as a proliferation problem akin to reprocessing. While heavy water is occeded to operate a natural uranium power plant like Atucha, the ability to produce heavy water would give Argentina the capability of constructing a large natural uranium research reactor like Israel's Dimona — which yields enough plutoni-um to produce several nuclear weapons annually.

Adm. Castro emphasized that

Argentina sees oo need for ouclear weapons, but is determined to control the fuel cycle for the natural uranium power reactors it intends to continue constructing.

He said that Argentina believes that reprocessing will be economi-cal by the 1990s, and that all countries in the future will have to Finally the government has responded. Spending to aid solar development will reach almost $500 to reprocess or not."

SMALL-CRAFT WARNINGS — The nuclear-powered ship Mutsu is harassed by craft as it enters Sasebo Harbor in Japan for repairs expected to take three years. The boats were piloted by leftists and militant unionists who say that it is unsafe. Repairs are expected to cost about $29 million.

"A lot of the big companies are riding in oo big DOE [Department of Energy] contracts." Others Approached Anthooy Clifford, an executive with the largest remaining inde-pendent solar cell company, Solarex, said, "We have been approached by numerous Fortune 500 companies, including several major oil companies."

Some solar advocates say this is necessary to press the development and commercialization of technologies which are still capital intensive. A recent Department of Energy study completed by the Jet Propul-sion Laboratory said that the oil companies and the so-called systems companies, such as the large acrospace firms, are in the best position because of their financial staying power and management.

The fact that these corporations have joined the environmentalists and consumer advocates in backing solar power is seen by Department of Energy Assistant Secretary for Solar Applications Omi Walden as a positive sign. "It means that solar has a truly national constituency, which is what is needed if we are to Obviously, the corporations foresee big profits. Ten years from oow, the solar industry will be a big business." said Sheldon Butt, presideut of the Solar Energy Industries

At the moment, however, solar power is largely uneconomic and dependent on subsidies. Still, it has a big following oo Capitol Hill.

"Nobody is anti-solar in Wash-ingtoo in a political sense," said Denis Hayes, head of a national solar lobby coalinon.

A recent Harris Survey found 94 percent of respondents in favor of solar energy development. This popularity is not lost oo the

Last week the Senate approved a House-passed bill under which the government would buy $1.5 billioo worth of photovoltaic cells over 10 years — a big shot in the arm for

Gasohol can be made from grain, wood chips, sugar, even cheese. Many big grain companies, Holly Sugar, Archer Daniel Mid-land and Standard Brand's, are ma-

Senators Conclude Park Bought No Real Influence

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16 (AP) — There is on evidence that any senator was influenced by South Korean money, the Senate Ethics Com-mittee said in releasing its final report, but up to three senators or their aides may have broken laws in taking it.

In the report released today, the committee concludes:

 The Justice Department should iovestigate "substantial credible evidence" that Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., or an aide broke a law by taking money from a lobby-ist friend of Tongsun Park in the capitol.

The 1948 law, apparently oever enforced, prohibits congressmen from taking campaign contributions oo federal property. Sen. Bayb denies that be did so.

The late Sen. John McClellan. D-Ark., broke the same law by oot reporting a $1,000 campaign contribution he admitted he got from Mr.

Park in 1972. The committee says oeither Sen. McClellan, if be were alive, oor any former Humphrey campaign aide could be prosecuted oow because statutes of limitation ran out in

But the committee said it is turn-emphasized at a news conference that their investigation found no evidence that any senator was in-fluenced by South Korean money.

Further, Sen. Harrison Schmitt the committee's vice chairman said, "the element of misconduct was extremely small."

The report quotes Edward Mean gan, a Washington lawyer and lok-byist, as saying be gave Sen, Bays $1,000 at Mr. Park's request, din-ing a meeting in Sen, Bayh's Cap-tol office Oct. 8, 1974. Mr. Park testified that he contributed an addictonal $1,500 to $1,800 to Sen. Bayh's campaign possibly at the same meeting but to a Bayb aide, Jason Berman, before

Sen. Bayn arrived. Allegations Denied

Both Sen. Bayh and Mr. Beings, said they refused to take any contribution from Mr. Park and legally took the $1,000 from Mr. Merngan outside of federal property.

The report says that "if either contribution was received at that meeting, then a crime was commit.

"Moreover, if Mr. Park's continuous accepted, then a second crime may have been commined because the cootribution was not publicly reported," it says.

16 (AP) — Despite cleanup opera-tions, a million gallons of oil spilled from a Greek tanker off the Welsb coast is still a major threat to seabirds and to one of Europe's finest bird sanctuaries, officials said

A flotilla of British ships sprayed detergents yesterday on a 10-by-6-mile slick from the listing tanker Christos Ritas which ran onto coastal rocks Thursday and began leaking its cargo of 10.3 millioo gallons of Iranian crude oil.

The operation was partially successful, officials said. High winds caused some patches of oil to break away and endanger the beaches of St. Brides Bay and the bird sanctuary of Grassholme Island, a resting place for thousands of birds.

Besides the decision-making process, Prof. Simon has also made other important contributions to economics, the academy said.

"For example, his interest in simplifying and understanding complex decision-making situations led him at an early stage to the problem of breaking down complex equation systems. His studies of single 'casual order in such systems have been of particular impor-tance," the academy said.

So far this year, 6,500 Viet-namese have left Malaysian camps for the United States, compared to a total for all of last year of 1,500. About 6,000 have emigrated to other countries, mainly Australia.

However, the United States pledged itself this year to admit all boal refugees who cannol find permaneot asylum in another country, while setting the total Indochinese refugee quota at 25,000 yearly. This has been somewhat increased recently by a pooling of refugee quo-tas for the two hemispheres, which may provide several thousand more places for Indochinese refugees.

But with 115,000 Laotian and Cambodians awaiting emigration from camps in Thailand, 18,000 Vietnamese here, and an increased flow of Vietnamese to the Philippines and Hong Kong as well as Malaysia, refugee programs of the coontries of permanent asylum are heavily oversubscribed. While the Thai government has accepted the principle of allowing a limited number of refugees to resettle there, oo Asian country is willing to let Vietnamese stay indefinitely.

And as the flow of Vietnamese cootiones - and perhaps it will increase later this year with better weather—the discrepancy between the United States pledge to offer asylum to all those unable to find homes elsewhere and the ceiling on nomes elsewhere and the ceiting on the total number it is willing to ac-cept becomes increasingly evident. For the time being, refugee offi-cials say, there is oo change in Malaysian policy. But they report also that Kuala Lumpur is showing signs of increasing concern. It has declared all refugees camps as spe-cial security areas and has sharply limited access. Journalists are not allowed to visit them.

Any change in Malaysia's atti-tude, the officials say, will lead to more deaths at sea. Current refugees programs of Western countries are oo more than "a finger in the dike." a Western official here said.

Youth Unemployment Admitted as Problem in China

By Linda Mathews

HONG KONG, Oct. 16 — Peking has acknowleged that thousands of Chinese youths who have fled back to the cities from their mandatory tours of duty in the countryside are creating a problem familiar in the West but oew to China — teen-age unemployment.

The Chinese media had previouscited high unemployment rates in the United States as evidence of capitalism's failings and implied that Communist societies were immune. But last week the People's Daily admitted for the first time that "the phenomenon of 'people finding no work to do' exists" in China, too, especially among the while no figures were supplied oo the oumber of idle workers nationally, the newspaper indicated that unemployment had become a serious concern in some regions.

"Solving the unemployment problem in cities and townships is a matter of major importance," the three-part People's Daily commentary was headlined. The article was particularly unusual in that it admitted that a substantial number of mitted that a substantial number of the 16 million high school gradu-ates sent to the countryside under orders from the late Mao Tse-tung have been drifting back to the cities illegally and leading a hand-to-month existence there.

Mao's successors, it appears from the People's Daily, are taking a lenient stand toward these runa-ways. Instead of censuring the youths and returning them to their rural posts - the standard punishment uoder Mao — the administra-tioo of Premier Hua Kuo-leng seems to be trying to put them to work in the cities. That, however, is oot easy because of their oumber.

In Tsinan, a city of ooe million that is the capital of Shantung province, about 68,000 persons were carried on the jobless rolls last SINGAPORE, Oct. 16 (AP) -Vietnamese Premier Phani Van Dong arrived here today on a twoyear, the People's Daily reported.

> There are no unemployment benefits in China, so the hurden of supporting a jobless youth usually falls on his family. These youths sometimes support themselves by forging ra-tion cards or stealing. According to refugees, runaways from the coun> tryside account for most of the crime in the cities. The party's willingness to find johs for youths dissatisfied with field work seems to portend major changes in the so-called down-tothe-countryside movement that has been a fixture of life for a decade.

Beginning in the 1930s, the Chinese Communist Party encouraged urban youths to get a taste of farm life. In 1968, after young Red Guards went out of control, Mao made country living mandatory to force the youths to integrate with the workers and peasaots, and to oarrow the differences between town and country and between mental and manual labor.

The program turned out to be one of the most unpopular of Mao's revolutionary experiments. Many city-bred youths loathed the tedium of rural life and proved to be inept farm hands. Their parents complained hitterly about the long distances that separated them from their children. And the peasants, who were supposed to do the reeducating, resented the presence of outsiders who could contribute little to communal income.

There were signs earlier this year that Mao's successors had decided that the program should be revised.

The People's Daily reported in January, for example, that some of the 16 million "sent-down youths" would be relieved of field work and transferred to new jobs in industry, trade, education and communica-

Economists here had assumed that, despite job opportunities in expandiog industries and government bureaucracy, the majority of uproofed youths would have to remain on the farm for life. China's industrial base was still too small, the analysts said, to provide white-collar jobs for the millions of grad-uates from its high schools.

The People's Daily account of Tsioan's employment picture, however, suggests that the party hier-archy may non believe that the talents of its youth can be put to better use in the city, even if there is some short-term unemployment.

That attitude may make it more difficult to persaude young people to try farm life. "If the party no longer makes a fuss about runaways returning to the cities, then why would any city kid want to go to the countryside in the first place?" a diplomat here said. * Los Angeles Times

Economics on Capitol Hill

Considering the lengthy woes of the dollar at struggle over virtually all of Mr. Carter's prond Washington's apparent inability to cope posals and modifications of them at almost and Washington's apparent inability to cope with them, there is considerable irony in the number of Nobel Prizes for economics that Americans have accumulated during the brief decade in which those prizes have been given. But it is possible that the donors this time are being more realistic, if, indeed, they are not offering some pointed advice to the United States. For Herbert Simon, the present winner, has been awarded the prize because of his studies of decision-making in determining economic policy. In other words. he is not honored for work in the dismal science itself but in the often dismal means men use in attempting to cope with that science.

Since economics may follow its own laws but is much played upon by human devices, learning what people do to economics can be just as important as the thing itself. The United States is presently facing an economic future that has men in public office cautious and many in private enterprise alarmed. So it needs strong and viable policies, administered by the president and made. into law by Congress, backed by public opinion. But as the 95th Congress has amply demonstrated, and as Mr. Carter's various stands suggest, the first two elements of policy-making cannot be effective unless the third is manifest. And since the popular will manifests itself in many ways, from local elections to soundings taken by opinion polls. Congress, most immediately responsible to the voters, is the most uncertain.

All of the House and a third of the Senate will appear before their electors next month. Both as a means of being re-elected and as a demonstration of their responsibility to the people, they wanted to know what the voters wanted, and either delayed until they could get clear signals or fought for their own constituency when they believed they had a clue. The result was a painfully long-drawn-out was enough to satisfy the vote every level.

There are those who blame Mr. Carter for this, for not knowing how to address a Congress or at least for a costly period of learning the technique. But it cannot be forgotten that opinion in the United States is in flux. There is still the legacy of Vietnam and Watergate to work against White House leadership; there is also the effect of inflation, both as a general hardship in increasing prices and as the very specific problem of taxes rising as private income tries to match rising costs.

This was a Democratic Congress; it did not represent, as in Harry Truman's day, a fight between a Republican Congress and a Democratic president. But it was aware of a growing restlessness within the United States over taxes - Proposition 13 was only one indication of that. And there was a growing consciousness of the waste and corruption that so often accompanies governmental ventures into the broader fields of economics. The result was increasing caution in such aspects of federal activity as were once summed up (in another period of economic disturbance) by the words "New Deal."

Congress has not turned its back on the need for a national policy to stimulate the economy and take care of those hurt by the recession. The next month will demonstrate how strong, and bow effective, the conservative drift among voters has become. But the certainties of some appeals to the national Treasury have been shattered; the main questiotion is whether they will be replaced by another set, by a fear of taxation that will cripple the national ability to provide truly necessary services. The United States has known, since 1932, a truly massive change in respect to what government can and should do. The 95th Congress has by no means reverted to the old ways. But the coming elections should demonstrate whether its caution

Mexico's Oil

Mexico is discovering, to its own astonishment, that it evidently has the resources to become one of the world's great oil producers. In the United States, this nation of optimists, a lot of people have immediately begun to assume that U.S. dependence on Arab sources will now sharply decline and that any need for conservation has ended. Both conclusions are incorrect. The Mexican discoveries are greatly to be welcomed, both for Mexico's sake and for its future customers. But the development of an increasing U.S.-Mexican trade in oil, on terms satisfactory on both sides of the border, is going to be a considerable test of U.S. diplomatic

The gigantic scale of the Mexican fields has only gradually become apparent. Pemex, the Mexican state oil monopoly, was highly conservative in the reports that it sent along to its government. As for the Mexican government, it felt no obligation to tell the world. But estimates have steadily risen over the past two years, and last month President Lopez Portillo announced figures that would put Mexico's potential production in a class with Saudi Arabia's. That kind of estimate is always speculative, but there is more than enough evidence to establish that these new reserves are extremely impressive.

Since Mexico has oil and the United States is ready to buy, there's a widespread tendency here to assume that it's just a matter of connecting the pipes. People who think that is so might usefully reflect on the parallels between Mexico and Iraq, another country with very large reserves. The Iraqis have been expanding production over the past decade - but slowly and with the most extreme care not to allow any foreign company or customer any degree of influence in their oil policy. The rate at which Iraq sells oil is measured to its internal development requirements, not to the needs of its customers abroad. It would not be surprising if Mexico followed the Ira-

Mexico was the first country to expropriate foreign oil operations, in 1938, and oil occupies a special place in the theory and practice of Mexican nationalism. But there are good economic reasons for Mexicans to think twice about moving rapidly to very high levels of production. The great central preoccupation of Mexican economic planning is the country's population growth rate, one of the highest in the world. Only 15 years ago there were 40 million Mexicans. Today there are 64 million, and by the end of the century there will be more than 120 million.

Working with the World Bank, the Mexican government is moving toward development plans that emphasize agriculture and labor-intensive industries, to provide food and jobs. The government intends to use its oil revenues to finance this kind of expansion. Capital-intensive industry is likely to be deferred.

Certainly Mexico will sell its oil for no less than the world price. Unfortunately, the United States has badly mishandled a preliminary test case involving natural gas. The Mexicans offered gas at a price linked to the cost of heating oil. The U.S. government has refused to approve the sale, apparently out of fear that it might derail the extremely fragile compromise on the natural gas pricing bill. Understandably, the Mexicans are offended to find their interests given second place to the Carter administration's transient political embarrassments. But there are more substantial differences ahead. Mexico has already indicated that its attitude toward oil and gas sales will be affected by U.S. positions on issues like Mexican immigration and access to the U.S. market for Mexican agricultural and industrial products.

The U.S. position in this kind of negotiation is not going to be a comfortable one. U.S. oil consumption is still rising rapidly more rapidly than Mexico is likely to expand oil production. The United States continues to be a buyer in a sellers' market.

Fifty Years Ago October 16, 1928

NEW YORK — Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night issued a communication to all the building trade unions in New York and its vicinity, in which he says that "sympathetic strikes" have undoubtedly led to most of the trouble here. He counsels all the unions which have not done so to accept the employers' plan, and return to work quickly. Sympathetic strikes at construction sites are prohibited under this agreement. Such strikes bring fearful memories of the un-American closed-shop policy.

JERUSALEM - Fresh disturbances have been caused here as the result of the construction of two upper layers of stones on the top of the Wailing Wall by Moslems, who control the area in which stands also the Omar Mosque. The British district commissioner has refused to interfere and justifies the building on the strength of an old ruling that the Jewish temples at the western wall are situated underground and that the section above ground at which the Jews worship is the property of the Omar Mosque. The Jewish community has filed a protest.

Gone With the 'Wind Faction'

By William Safire

WASHINGTON - No nation WASHINGTON — No nation denounces opportunism like China. We give credit to a polincian for being flexible when be leans our way; but in China, wall posters are slapped up castigating the unhappy centrist as a member of the despised "wind faction." Peking's Liberation Army Daily once described the main features of "those who follow the wind" as

"those who follow the wind" as They're like grass growing atop a wall, bending with the wind. They are as changeable as clouds and rain. Their necks function like ballbearings and their waists like spring bands, and wind gauges are planted on their heads."

This dish of sizzling rhetorical rice was recalled last week as Wu Teb - pronounced "Woo-Duh" was fired from his job as mayor of Peking. For years, Wu Teh has been the man in the middle, the foremost member of what his enemies call "the wind faction." The fall of Wu Teh signals a disturbing trend in the small circle that rules a billion human beings.

Mayor Wu came to power in the mid-1960s, taking advantage of the Cultural Revolution beaded by the most radical faction of Mao's followers. A decade later — with the ideologically pure "Gang of Four" dominant in China during Mao's last days — it was Wn Tch who was responsible for keeping public order in Peking.

When the anti-radicals brought off their great riot in Tienanmen Square, Wu walked a tightrope: At first he let the rioters make their point showing affection for the late Chou En-lai, and then Wu cracked a few skulls to show that the followers of Chou and his right-hand man, Teng Hsiao-ping, were not running China.

A few months later, Wu went with the anti-radical way the wind was hlowing. As the "Shanghai radicals" made their bid for solitary power. Wu joined the plot concocted by Hua Kuo-feng (Mao's Chief of secret police and successor) to lure them to Peking where Madame Mao and her cohorts were all arrested. Thus Wu could claim some credentials as being part of the "smashing of the Gang of

But Teng Hsiao-ping, 74, and now China's No. 2 man, did not forget Wu's old associations in the Cultural Revolution. Nor did those who noted at Tienanmen Square forget who read out the order aborting their demonstration.

Last year, in Peking's Great Hall of the People, I asked a high party official why wall posters were permitted in Peking denouncing Wu Teh. He answered that there was free speech in China, which meant that vengeance-minded followers of Teng had permission to harass and worry Mayor Wu, who had not suffered under the Gang of Four.

Finally, last week, Teng felt strong enough to demand Wu's scalp, and Chairman Hua evidently went along. And now to the point of this piece: How does all this Chinese Communist in-lighting affect

The fall of Wu means that the anti-radical followers of Teng are not content with the humiliation of the top leadership of the faction that once ground them into the ground. It means that thousands of leaders of the local level in China remain to be rooted out and will be replaced by men uncontaminated by compromise.

One might assume that would be good for the West: after all, anuradical Teng wants more trade with the West, and seeks to speed up oil development and industrialization. Teng will welcome energy czar James Schlesinger to Peking next week, as both display interest in increased trade potential and solidarity against Soviet expansionism. But the worrisome fact is that the Teng faction is bent on revenge. Men in their 70s who were forced out a decade ago, are now punishing the younger men.

Time is against Mr. Teng. Instead of absorbing the younger "wind faction," he is tilting against it. This is likely to create a strong and resentful underground, waiting for the chance to drive out the ag-ing leadership and to reject its philosophy.

Anyone prognosticating the fu-ture of China is reading tea leaves, but here is one way to read them after the dismissal of Mayor Wu: The leaders, who now have the upper hand, are doing what the "gang" they overthrew would have done — demanding purity. No centrists need apply.

That is a mistake. Chairman Hua, who did not do at all badiy during the Cultural Revolution,

Not Aboard

The Russians are not aboard the Camp David Mideast peace agree-ments, but they do not seem ready to take responsibility for causing their collapse. By the time Jimmy Carter asked Leonid Brezhove to rebuke Moscow's client in Syria by supporting a cease-fire in Lebanon, there were already grounds to expect Brehznev to go along, as he promptly did.

The administration has publicly signaled its approval of the new vismoratorium on high-level trips to Moscow and deciding to send the secretary of the Treasury early in December to talk trade — after SALT, Moscow's favorite East-

"You probably wonder why the British government is still trying to stand in our way," he said in a con-fidential tone. "Well, I can tell you. Harold Wilson is a Communist."

That bizarre conversation comes to mind as the Rhodesian drama plays itself out. History is likely to see the wbole episode of Rhodesia's independence under white rule, from 1965 to whenever the country becomes Zimbabwe, as a bizarre interlude. But it actually has quite a lot to tell us - about Britain as well as Africa, and about the realities of power in the world.

As colonial rule faded out elsewhere, a relative handful of whites - 250,000 among more than 4 million Africans — proposed to govern Rhodesia indefinitely and enjoy most of its economic rewards. Few of the whites had any stature or ex-perience in public life. The man who thought Prime Minister Wilson was a Communist was not the only one in the government who sounded like a Birch Society pam-

But Rhodesia did survive. Year after year it slipped the necessary imports through the sanctions apparatus, and found buyers for enough of its products to keep its economy afloat. Why was expectanon so confounded? British weakness was one reason.

If Suez a decade earlier had shown that Britain could oo longer exercise power at a distance, Rhodesia brought that truth home in humiliation. Or so it appears as one looks back at the performance of the principal factor on the British side, Prime Minister Wilson.

At the very beginning, Mr. Wilson foreswore the one action that might have ended the rebellion quickly: sending troops. Britain did not bave the resources to send a large number, but some thought a symbolic force might have been enough to bring the Rhodesians back to the Queen they had so often cheered. Instead, Mr. Wilson postured.

He kept saying that sanctions would soon "bite." Twice he met Mr. Smith aboard British warships, where for all the tough talk, he tried to tempt Mr. Smith with large concessions. The Economist of London, looking back at that period recently, wrote mockingly of "gritty Mr. Wilson, the bero of so many battles with seasickness aboard H.M.S. Tiger and Fearless."

Sir Harold (as he became after leaving office) said last April that sanctions had failed because the United States had been weak and Gen. de Gaulle had "cheated" and let French oil go to Rhodesia. Then last month, a British official report said that British oil had gone to Rhodesia by subterfuge — and that the government officials bad known all about it. Providing advice and financing on major capital projects is a Morgan specialty

Developing, extracting, and processing the earth's resources require projects that are large, complex, and expensive. A single enterprise may involve several companies and government entities, and a variety of currencies. To manage these complexities, chief financial officers of multinational companies involved in major projects often turn to The Morgan Bank and its Project Finance group for special know-how and experience.

Morgan's experts in project finance serve companies all over the world—in mining, chemicals, metals, utilities, energy resources. Often the group is called in at the inception of a project. Typically, a team is formed that includes other Morgan specialists—mining and petroleum engineers, analysts who are industry specialists, export credit and private placement experts. Together they develop a unique financing package that reflects the economics of a project, accommodates the project's tax, legal, and accounting requirements, and establishes a loan repayment schedule that synchronizes with project cash flows.

Executives responsible for large projects value these skills. They also value The Morgan Bank's up-to-theminute knowledge of the sources of funds in the world's key money centers, and our experience in forming multisource lending groups for major projects. Our Project Finance specialists are able to match lenders to borrowers in a way that is most advantageous to a given project.

For more information about how Morgan conducts project financing and how we might help you with a major project anywhere in the world, talk with the Morgan officer who calls on you.

Leather Is Strong at Florence

By Hebe Dorsey

FLORENCE, Oct. 16 (1HT) -Florence has been hard hit by the fact that the major Italian talents now show in Milan. However. this lovely city on the Arno, where the whole idea of Italian fashion was born years ago, still attracts a sizable and significant crowd of international buyers.

Norman Wechsler, president of l. Magnin, comes here "for three reasons: Better prices, exclusivity and better deliveries." John Devoriq. buyer for and part-owner of London's Regine Shop, also finds Florence rewarding. "Of course we have all the big names." he says. "But, snob appeal aside, here you still find the small, unknown house with whom the says. es with whom you can make mon-ey. Also, it's nice working here. with the embroidered dresses they need for their petro-dollar customers. As for Vincent Knoll, from Bergdorf-Goodman, he too finds Florence important because some of the houses that show here do not show in Milan — an example being Alegri, whose raincoats were re-portedly designed with Giorgio Armani's help.

Their Own Reasons

Actually, a number of current Florentine collections were designed by major Italian designers who for reasons of their own do not like that fact widely advertised. Ki-tai was signed by Giancarlo Ferre, another first-class designer: Alma is run by a trio of young enterpreneurs, but the collection was designed by Gianni Versace.

Doing a $25-million business last season. Florence is not to be sneezed at. But while it should remain a place for volume and ruoof-the-mill stylings, it may also start to become a platform for good young talent.

In that respect, it is significant that one of the best collections this season was Touche by Enrico Coveri, who lives as well as shows here. A Florentine with a face out of a della Robbia sculpture, Coveri, 27, showed spirited, well-built clothes that carried senses of color and humor. His style can be compared to Kenzo's in Paris, whom he obviously admires. His best moments were the deluxe sailor look (complete with white sequin sailor's caps), and the knee-length jumpsuits — some of them leather - over sexy maillots.

On the whole, there is a strong leather trend in Florence, with in-teresting mixtures of linen and leather at Gherardini's and a sexy. back-to-the-40s look at both Aymo's and Alma's.

from the Italian woods. The oroli, exquisite wild mushrooms of a color so startlingly orange-gold as to suggest a touch of hallucination, come on the market at the beginning of October but are never in over-supply. And the Italian white truffle is even more precious than the black truffle of

At La Fontanella, the ovoli are tossed with slivers of celery and matchsticks of gruyere. Shavings of white truffle the thin sliving white truffle — the thin slicing bespeaks their rarity — exude an aroma hinting of moss, and garlic and violets, and are spread on top in a light coverlet. The resulting heap of ovell and tartuffi blanchi is a plate of paradise. The unad-vertised temptation should be available until December, depending on the weather. The price is what you would expect: Molto. Perhaps on the theory that you cannot have too much in the line of perishable pleasures, the waiter suggested porcini arrosta as a main course. These saucer-sized flesby wild mushrooms of another prized variety are simply roasted.

However, as Gertrude Stein once observed, if perfection is good, more perfection is not necessarily better. So we decided instead on the day-in day-out house speciality, a bistecca Fiorentina all Griglia. It cut like hutter, melted in the mouth; its flavor evoked remembrances of good things past.

"Mmmm," mused Tosella Falsi, small, spry and feisty, "Americans think they are the only ones who have steak," All the Fontanella's beef is from Tuscany and is grilled over wood charcoal as it was in Mamma's osteria near Florence.

The restaurant is adamantly Tuscan, even though husband Osvaldo is from a village near Pistoia. There are Toscano salame and finocchiona (a fat pistachio-and peppercorn-studded sausage), and such land-mark dishes of the Florentine region as pappardelle al sugo di caccia (broad noodles with a dark rich sauce made with with hare) and ri-

Scientists Study Soggy Sandwich

CONDON, Oct. 16 (IHT) — A sandwich left on the ocean floor for 10 months did more than all previous observations to change ideas about the metabolic activity of deep-seabed organisms, the Brit-ish Weekly New Scientist has

The sandwich, packed along with an apple in a paper bag, was left in the miniature submarine Alvin when it sank 10 years ago as the result of a broken cable. The Alvin was recovered almost a year later. and the sandwich, drenched in sea water all that time, was found to be perfectly fresh.

This showed that metabolic processes in the ocean depths proceed hundreds of times more slowly than those at higher elevations. Biologists had previously believed that micro-organisms on the seabed had to work at about the same rate as those on the surface to break down the rain of organic debris descending from the ocean's upper layers.

The nature of this slowed activity is not understood, and is variously ascribed to oxygen lack, high pres-sure or lack of food,

Foamy Industry

In an attempt to contribute to this foamy industry, a small school on the outskirts of Munich has been graduating about 50 brewmas-ters every 18 months. There are two university-level brewery schools in Germany (one in Berlin, one in Freising), but Doemens, a private, non-university institution, offers a shorter technical program that attracts students from around the world. Foreign enrollment at Doemens stands at about 44 percent; alumni are at work in 66 countries.

Milwaukee Study Links Obesity to Environment

TEW YORK, Oct. 16 (NYT) -For the average person, heredity is far less important than environment in determining his tendency to overweight, according to the findings of a large study by. Milwaukee scientists.

The researchers say their find-ings remove a common excuse among obese people for not losing weight and replace it with the real-istic hope that weight is within their

Their conclusions were based on a study of 254 families with adopted children and 10,337 families with natural children. The families were gathered from among those of 73,532 women who belonged to a weight-reduction group called TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly).

The researchers examined the tendency to overweight among the adopted brothers and sisters and among the natural siblings, and found very little difference between the two. In other words, if a child's adopted brother or sister was no be was nearly as likely to be in himself as if the sibling was a blood relative. Thus, similarity of correctionment was found to be more de cisive than inheritance in determ ing degrees of overweight.

All told, the study indicated that genetic factors accounted for the percent of the variance in obesity and that environment was responsible for at least 32 percent. This finding runs counter to those apprevious smaller studies which makes the studies wh parents' tendencies to overweight ()),

DM Revaluation Said Too Little

sures that were adding to the weakness of the dollar.

This was due to the fact that because the dollar is the international transaction currency, guilders, kroner and francs were being sold, in anticipation of a revaluation against the mark, for dollars which in turn were sold to buy marks. West German Finance Minister Hans Matthoefer reported that this speculation pulled close to 10 bilweeks, swelling the growth in the nation's money supply and fueling fears of a new inflationary burst.

With the weight of these dollar sales lifted, dealers expected the dollar to perform better against the strong currencies — the mark and the Swiss franc.

This is what happened in early trading. The dollar, for example, rose to 1.87 DM from 1.862 Friday as speculatative positions were unwound. But by late afternoon, when New York began trading for the day, the dollar began falling de-spite active central bank intervention. By the close of European trad-ing, the dollar had fallen to a new low against the mark of 1.8615 DM although it was up against the Swiss frane and other major curren-

Dollar Under Pressure

However, in late trading in New York, after European markets had closed, the dollar came under severe pressure, falling rapidly and sharply. It was quoted at 1.845 DM. It fell to 1.51 Swiss franes compared to the European close of 1.5275 and to 4.2375 French francs compared to 4.2675. Against the yen, it fell to 182.30 compared to 185,15 earlier in the day.

The prevailing view in the foreign exchange market is that a substantial further appreciation of the mark will be needed if the planned European Monetary System is to get started next year as planned. The experts argue that West Germany's low increase in productioo costs - smaller rises in labor TOKYO, Oct. 16 (NYT) — Japan ing government predictions that the ad another huge trade surplus in surplus would drop soon.

Meanwhile, Japan's trade surplus with the United States rose sharply to $1.035 billion from $682 million in August, reversing the downward trend of the previous five months.

Japanese officials have consistently predicted that both the overall surplus and the surplus with the Unit-ed States would fall, but the September figures disprove these forecasts and are likely to strengthen the yen.

The Japanese trade surplus with the Common Market was also up sharply at $578 million, close to the record of $582 million reached in July last year — and also reversing a downward trend.

The latest figures suggest that the government forecast of a surplus on current account of $13.5 billion in the fiscal year, revised upward from an earlier estimate of $6 hil-lion, will still be too low.

They also imply that U.S. pressure on Japan to open its market to foreign goods will increase, especially the demand for Japan to allow in more farm products, notably beef and citrus products,

The latest trade figures also make it doubtful whether Japan will drop its controls on exports, including export restrictions on major items sold to the U.S. market such as cars, television sets, steel and ships, which account for about 40 percent of all shipments.

International Herald Tribune

Focus on Hessische Landesbank - Girozentrale ·

"Half of Germany's top 10 banks are Frankfurt-based We're one of them."

Let's start with Frankfurt. Why is Frankfurt so important?

in Continental Europe.

"Frankfurt ranks among the world's foremost banking and financial centers. 152 German banking institutions operate here, and Frankfurt has 161 international banks, more than any other city

The Bundesbank is headquartered here, and the Frankfurt Stock Exchange is Germany's largest, accounting for nearly half of the stock exchange transactions, 57 per cent of dealings in foreign shares and 80 per cent of the business in foreign fixed-interest securities.

Perhaps less well known internationally is that Hessische Landesbank is one of Frankfurt's big native-born banks. Half of Germany's top 10 banks are Frankfurtbased. We're one of them."

Now about the bank itself. What's its size and structure?

"With total assets of DM 42 billion, Hessische Landesbank is Germany's 8th largest bank, 3rd among Landesbanks. As a governmentbacked regional bank, our liabilities are guaranteed jointly by the State of Hesse and its Sparkassen and Giro Association. We also act as banker to the State of Hesse, from which our name is derived, and perform clearing functions for the 52 regional Sparkassen."

What about your service facilities?

"We concentrate on wholesale banking and medium to long-term fixed-rate DM lending. As a German universal bank, our facilities cover the full range of commercial and investment banking services. Because we don't operate a branch network, we can devote our time and energy to wholesale banking activities.

In recent years we have strengthened our international investment banking capabilities considerably. For example, in 1977 we participated in 289 international issues. And we provide comprehensive investment management and brokerage services, including securities trading. Our membership of the Frankfurt Stock Exchange facilitates dealing in quoted shares and fixed-interest securities."

And sources of funds?

"A large part of our funding is done by issuing bearer bonds and SD Certificates (Schuldscheindarlehen). The total in circulation is more than DM 20 billion."

Who are the bank's main clients?

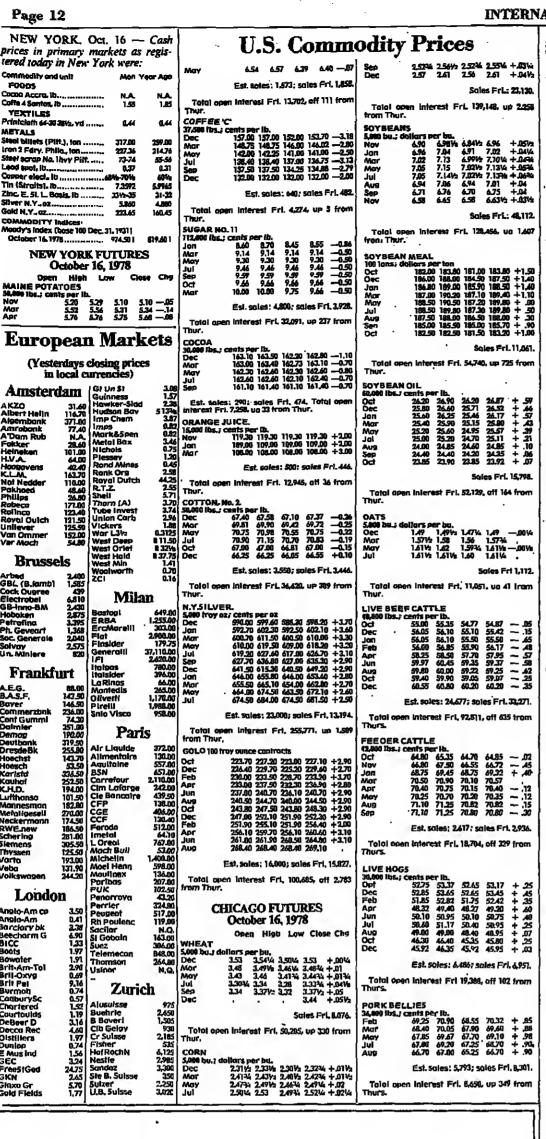

"As a wholesale bank, our service facilities are tailored for large, internationally active corporations, foreign governments, and other financial institutions, as well as subsidiaries of international companies operating in Germany. As bankers to the State of Hesse, we naturally support its state-wide and municipal programs. We also work closely with Hesse's Sparkassen and their clients, especially on the foreign side."

How do you see your position developing internationally?

"Frankly, a number of German banks offer similar high-quality services, and some of them have a head start on us in the international field. Without neglecting our home base in Frankfurt, we have assembled a team of banking professionals devoted to building a strong international track record based on pragmatic banking principles, the most modern technical and support facilities, and the highest standards of client service. Banking in Frankfurt is quite competitive, and the banks who try harder for their clients and give them fast, personal service often have the edge. This is one of our major objectives,"

The people with the biggest stake in Japanese industry choose Toshiba.

According to a recent independent survey,* in 1977 Toshiba ranked second among all Japanese companies as the favourite choice of employer among the country's engineering undergraduates. And with 14 Japan's lifetime employment system, choosing a company is one of the most momentous decisions in a person's career.

Why do so many of Japan's elite students rate Toshlba and its pros- 1.00

They know that Toshiba is a powerhouse of the country's economy, ranking 37th in Fortune's 1977 line-up of industrial corporations outside the U.S. A company whose worldwide activities are firmly founded on its massive strength in the domestic sector. A leader in fields as diverse as heavy apparatus, industrial electronics and consumer products, manufacturing giant power plants, electronic-controlled industrial and transportation systems, advanced semiconductor devices, satellite communication systems, sophisticated medical equipment, state-of-the-art audio and video equipment, reliable home appli-

U.S. Aide Seeks To Allay Fear of Protectionism

GENEVA, Oct. 16 (NYT) — The United States sought today to allay the fears of its major trading partners that protectionist action taken by Congress concerning textiles and countervailing duties could wreck the Multilateral Trade Negotistions here.

where the Muthlateral Trade Nego-tiations here.

Alonzo McDonald, head of the U.S. delegation, assured a meeting with other delegates that President Carter will be urged to veto the bill that removes U.S. negotiators' power to reduce tarriffs on textiles.
He also indicated these process. He also indicated that a successful conclusion of the negotiations as scheduled by the end of the year could eliminate the problem caused by Congress' refusal to extend beyond Jan. It's UNDERGROUND canon: the Beat Generation begat the hippie movement, which begat the present New Age alternative cul-ture. Although these social crup-tions share a common rebellion from their parent culture, a spiritu-al bond between them cannot be claimed on the mere basis of common disaffinity. The tie that binds them is glimpsed by John Clellon Holmes, in his landmark essay of 1952, "This Is the Beat Generation," perhaps the most perceptive and articulate voice in this "oral biography." As Holmes put it:
"Dostoevski wrote in the early 1880s that Young Russia is talking of nothing but the eternal questions now.' With appropriate changes, something very like this is begin-ning to happen in America, in an American way."

The Beat artists, while repelling the masses, cut deeply into those lives they touched. The seeds of the nves they touched. The seeds of the anti-war '60s were sown by the Beats, who saw World War II as "a symptom of their pessimism, not its proximate cause." Young people read "On the Road" and started thumbing to California, smoking marijuana and sollian raked marijuana and rolling naked down

The judgment of time is not yet in on the Beat contribution to U.S. letters. Is "On the Road" a fulcrum-point between yesterday's Great American Metaphor of conquering the frontier and today's of low-riding through the apoca-lypse? In "Jack's Book," poet Gary Snyder says the Beats gathered models and myths of freedom from Whitman, John Muir and Thoreau to the American burn." But the future may carry us down neatly landscaped literary chutes of artifice and order, reducing the spontaneous overflowings from the collective subconscious of Kerouac to a passing breeze in the winds of history.

The question of Jack Kerouse's literary reputation becomes relevant when assessing the worth of "Jack's Book." As Gifford and Lee acknowledge, "his fame... owed more to the people and events he portrayed than to the way in which he portrayed them." If his literary standing fails to match that fame, then "Jack's Book" will be relegated to its place along with the doz-ens of nostalgic Beat scrapbooks that have surfaced in recent years.

A Ginsberg Creation

"Beatnik." When you say the word, how many names come to mind? Kerouac, Ginsberg, Bur-roughs, Corso, Cassady, Ferlinghetti. This is a generation? Before Ginsberg became a severed poet and planetary citizen, he served a brief stint as a PR man. Sometimes I think he created the whole movement. Gifford and Lee raise similar speculations in their prologue.

Some of the ground they o has been mined previously. The media image of Kerouac as King of the Beats has been adequately dispelled before. It is already known that he was a lonely, tormented man, unhealthily devoted to his mother, unequipped to han-

An analogy exists between the taped monologues and Keronac's first-draft style. However, there are drawbacks to simply editing and printing spoken recollections. At their best, the interviewers draw from wells much less deep than the writer at his typewriter. At their worst, the can make a cultured, ar-ticulate woman like Carolyn Cassady sound semi-literate.

Of course, Kerouac's style suffers at times in the same way He felt words "ought to come ou' like toothpaste from a tube and non be changed."

According to his editor Malcolm Cowley, however, "he revised and revised well." Gifford and Lee provide bird's-eye views of some memorable scenes, with a wealth of first-hand accounts. All three stages may be necessary to find the best solution on the diagramed deal. Readers who feel they can get it right the first time should cover the East-West cards and plan the play in five clubs. West who has shown a strong hand in the bidding, leads the spade king

A similar problem arises in five clubs. If West takes two spade winners and then leads a heart South is forced to the same first-round guess in the club suit after taking discards. But when West, for reasons known only to himself, played a heart at the second trick South had more options.

What he did in practice was to win with the heart king in his hand. He assumed a two-one trump split, in which case the club six would be an entry to dummy and he would score 12 tricks.

They threw their three best pitch-They threw their three best pitchers into the weekend: Don Sutton on Friday night, only to lose by 5-1 to Ron Guidry's serve and Graig Nettles' backhand; Tommy John on Saturday, only to lose by 4-3 in 10 innings, and Burt Hooton yesterday, only to disintegrate by 12-2 in a rout that resembled Waterloo. It became one of the great lost

The stunning turn of events even turned Tommy Lasorda into a despondent person, and normally he is more than just the manager of the Dodgers; he is one of the raging evangelists in all California. In the past, he has been known to chuckle his way through defeat by quoting his favorite Hollywood comic, Don Rickles, to wit:
"That Rickles is something else.

But not this time. After the Dodgers had swonned for the third straight time in the Bronx, Lasorda became properly mournful. Not even the presence of Bob Hope, who threw out the first ball before yesterday's debacle, could lighten

"In the first gaine, Nettles killed for the Oakland offense, which us with the glove. He denied us a lot of runs. In the second game, that one play cost us the game — I saw it over and over again on television, and it should have been ruled interference by Reggie Jack-son. And in the third game, we just played very, very bad."

They played very, very badly, all right. The Yankees rattled three of and lost only 26 in Yankee Stadium during the regular season; they won two straight there in the playoffs and three straight in the Series.

That means they went 60 and 26 at bome this season, manling all visitors at a .698 clip. In other words, they were as hot in Yankee Stadium all year as they were every place else during their scorching streak to the pennant in August and September. No wonder the streak to the pennant in August and September. No wonder the Dodgers felt fleeced in New York.

Reverse Strategy

What happened was that the Yankees of half a century ago built their stadium to suit their team namely, Babe Ruth. But in the 1970s, George Steinbrenner built his team to suit the stadium namely, lefthanded power hitters like Reggie Jackson, Chris Cham-bliss and Nettles.

Whenever they provided the lead. Steinbrenner made certain they kept it by importing Rich Gos-sage, a relief pitcher so formidable that no work could be found for that no work could be found for memories of that long, lost week-Sparky Lyle, who won the Cy end in the land of the Yankees.

Maybe they will find what they need back home, where the sun shines and the Hollywood stars twinkle in the field-level box seats, back where Don Rickles and Phil Foster keep the locker room laughing, back where Russell likes the red clay of the infield. Anyway, the Yankee Stadium organist sent the Dodgers home with a few bars of "California, Here 1 Come," just when the harvest moon was rising for the last time in 1978 over a baseball game in the Bronx. If they have the time, and the character, they still could survive the Biletnikoff was in the game as a third wide receiver on a third-down play late in the second period, when he took a short pass over the middle and ran 30 yards to complete the 49-yard play.

Biletnikoff was downed at the Chiefs' 4-yard line and the Raiders took a 14-0 lead after Stabler threw a touchdown pass to tight-end Dave Casper on the next play.

Stabler completed two passes to Casper on a first period drive of 70 yards that ended with fullback Mark van Eeghen's 3-yard touchdown run. Van Eeghen scored on a l-yard plunge in the final quarter and safety Charles Phillips wrapped up Oakland's scoring, making the score 28-0, with a 41ard interception return for the now, huh?"

"Well, there seems to be more than usual, White-collar stuff. You know, federal employees ripping off the government: congressmen and senators taking money they shouldn't; contractors heing accused of payoffs. Not to mentioo the usual stuff of legitimate compa-nies being indicted for violating every law in the book.

The Godfather said, "I imagine the FBI must be working day and night finding out who is doing what "They're pretty busy, because every time a scandal breaks, the president or Congress asks the FBI to investigate it. It gets them off the hook.'

That's what I figured." he said. "I was wondering why it was so

Dinosaur Footprints Find Few Takers

ROCKY HILL Connecticut, Oct. 16 (UPI) — Dinosaur footprints are not much in demand. Richard Kruger, a geologist at Di-nosaur Park, has been giving away extra dinosaur footprints to any school or municipality in Connecticut, hut there have been only six takers in 10 years.

The footprints come in many shapes and sizes but are on slabs that weigh two tons, Kruger said.

"I think you're right. Godfather. I haven't heard one FBI man or Justice Department lawyer mention the mob since the Watergate scan-dal broke."

"I know I'm right, I used to have round-the-clock surveillance in front of my house. Four guys in a car at one time, and they took movtes of everyone going in and out. Now there's one gumshoe comes on Thursdays and takes three Polaroid pictures, and you don't see him again for a month."

"Does it bother you, Godfa-ther?"

"When you're in the big-time rackets you like to be taken seriously. The soldiers in the ranning and losing respect for me. They figure if the Feds aren't interested in what the Lean't be that important. The soldiers in the family are How can I keep everyone in line if the Justice Department acts like I'm not a threat?"

Egyptian Desert Yields Secrets

By Thomas W. Lippman

CAIRO (WP) — The trackless deserts of southwestern Egypt, one of the most remote regions on earth, are beginning to vield their secrets.

U.S. and Egyptian scientists, linked by satellite to communications facilities in Greenbell, Md., have completed a 12-day trek through the region. They found major iron ore deposits, prehistoric cave paintings of African wildlife, tools and artifacts of the people who lived there when the land was fertile, and new information about the way deserts are formed.

From Kharga oasis, south of Assiul, the scientists traveled by jeep and dune buggy to Jebel Uweinat, a hill that rises near the point where Egypt, Lihya and Sudan meet a distance of almost 500 miles across sand dunes, rocks and craggy valleys created by rushing water in an earlier geologic age.

But the land is so little known and so poorly mapped that the scientists do not know exactly where they were. They will find out only when they see the charts of the signals they transmitted each day to a U.S. Nimbus 6 satellite. From these they can determine what their positions were when the transmissions were made.

A local guide accompanied them, but participants said he was of little help in navigation because he is accustomed to crossing the desert at a camel's pace, judging location by time of day and made the district of the product of th by time of day, and was disoriented by the speed of motorized travel. The leader of the expedition was Farouk Baz. Egyptian-born research director of the

'Unbelievable'

The trek, he said, was "unbelievable, the hest trip of my life. We're talking about an area that covers one tenth of Egypt and everwhere you stop you see something signifi-can; — something that tells you about cli-matic change or the movement of sand or pre-Neolithic settlements or mineral depo-

Among the discoveries, he said, were: Hand axes, grindstones, spearheads and the shells of cooked ostrich eggs clustered around depressions that were probahly lakes millennia ago, Carbon dating of the eggshells, he said, will reveal when they were cooked, thus making it possible to say when man lived in the region.

"Lovely cave paintings" of baboons, giraffes and other animals now found only south of the African Sahel desert, and paint-ings of faces with black African features.

· "Fabulous examples of things that will help us understand Mars." Satellite photos had shown the area to be intriguingly similar to areas on the planet Mars as photographed by the U.S. Viking spacecrait, and geologists in the expedition hope that by analyzing the wind and erosion patterns they found in the Egyptian desert they can learn more about the Martian surface.

· An eight-mile-long deposit of good quality iron ore, exposed by the desert winds that have worn away the covering rock, Egypt is self-sufficient in iron ore, but Baz, a geologist by training, said there was more than enough to be commercially exploitable when present supplies dwindle.

Near the Sudanese border the scientists met a camel caravan of Bedouin traders making their 40-day trek to Egyptian mar-kets with a salty substance called trona. which is mixed with chewing tohacco. "They were shocked and so were we." Baz said of this chance meeting in the empty wasteland. Daytime temperatures went up to about 120 degrees Fahrenheit, Baz said, and the only living things the scienusts met. aside Daytime temperatures went up to about from the caravan, were one scorpion and a few foxes that left tracks in the sand camp one night.

The 33-man expedition brought back nearly three tons of material for study. Baz said, but to him the most important result of the trip was a conclusion which he expects to cause furious argument within the scientific community.

The conclusion he said, is that the activities of man have little to do with the creation of deserts.

"Deserts are made by God, not man, and the effect of man on the process is minimal," he said.

Baz said the United Nations and other organizations are wasting millions of dollars on programs aimed at preventing overgraz-ing and deforestation in the belief that these contribute to the encroachment of desert onto arable land.

"You can see it in the rock." he said. "It wasn't grazing by goats, eating away the shruhs, but erosion by the wind that did it." He said grasslands once flourished in what is now the Egyptian desert and were destroyed not hy man but by wind that dried up the water supply and eroded the soil and

Rock-Eater

Near the Libyan border, he said one can actually see the hot wind from a vortex that ears away at the rock, gradually reducing it to more sand. The natural structures most resistant to this process, he said, are those with tapered tops, and he speculated that this phenomenon may have inspired the an-cient Egyptians to develop the pyramid.

Baz said the papers prepared by the archaeologists, hotanists, geologists and geo-graphers in the expedition will be published as a book next year. The artifacts, he said, probably will be housed in a museum in Kharaga

Egypt is 96 percent desert. For centuries the Egyptians, drawing sustenance from the Nile, simply ignored the desert, but there has been a sudden interest in it recently.

Oil exploration, overcrowding of the Nile valley and the prospective recovery of the Sinal Desert from Israel have combined to stimulate academic and scientific research into the possibility of putting the empty wastelands to practical use.

In the southwest, Baz said a few of the remote valleys bave enough ground water to support shrubs and tamarisk trees, but there is no record of any rainfall for 20 years. The scientists concluded, he said, that there was no possibility of reclaiming any of that part of the country for agriculture.

In fact, satellite photography and an earlier expedition by Baz into the northern part of the desert, closer to the Mediterranean coasts, have shown that Egypt - far from reclaiming the desert - is literally losing fertile ground 10 the advancing sands.

Crew Looks Beyond PEOPLE: Northwest Passage

At Vancouver, British Columbia, the five-man, one-woman crew of the 35-foot cutter J.E. Bernier 2d completed a 28-month trip from Montreal to Greenland, across the top of the world and south along the west coast of Canada — the 15th and smallest craft to sail the Northwest Passage. Real Bouvier, its 32-year-old captain, is not satisified, though. He and his crew want to sail south to the Panama Canal and up the eastern coast of North America in an effort to become the first people in history to circumnavigate the continent, but they have not yet set a definite departure. Marie-Eve Thibault is believed to be the first woman to make the passage . . . In another water feat, but on the lighter side, Jim Carlin was well behind schedule, but he made - all 300 miles of the way from Boston to New York - aboard his "ietski." an 8-foot-long contraption that resembles a seagoing snowmobile. Carlin, a 32-year-old Saddle Brook, N.J., police officer, left Boston Harbor Saturday morning, boping to reach New York 12 ½ hours later. He docked the ski at 9:15 a.m. Simday. The next outings on the jetski's agenda: another 300 miles, from Cuba to Miami in December, and a 1,300-mile jaunt down the Mississippi next spring to raise money for the Muscular Dis-trophy Association. . Still on the water front, Philip Ross saw New York the hard way Sunday — from an extremely damp and chilly vantage point in the East and Hndson Rivers. The 21-year-old New York University law student swam 28 miles around Manhattan Island in seven hours and 44 minutes, breaking by 13 minutes the record set by marathon mermaid Diana Nyad. Said a spokesman for Ross, who hails from New London, Conn., "He says he's glad be got it over with and he's more exhilarated than tired." He should be. The winds were icy and the water tem-perature was 63 degrees.

In Leonardtown, Md., Heidi Harrelson, a 42-year-old grandmother from Florida, reigns as the new national oyster-shucking champion. Mrs. Harrelson, of Apalatchicola, Fla., won Sunday's finals by opening 24 oysters in a net time of 139.3 seconds. She beat men's division winner Cornelius Mackall, Shucker Ronnie Evans we told you about him Samrday placed a miserable fourth in the men's division. Besides receiving Country singer Bobbie Gentry, whose hit "Ode to Billy Joe" inspired a movie, married composer Jim Stafford. The ceremony was at a private home in Fayette County. a private home in Fayette County. Tennessee: Lt. Gov. John Wilder presided. It is the third marriage for Miss Gentry and the second for Stafford, both 35. . . Wedding bells are also in the offing at the Federal Correctional Institute at Pleasanton, Calif. In an interview with the New York Post impriswith the New York Post, imprisoned heiress Patty Hearst says she'll wed her former bodyguard. 30-year-old San Francisco police officer Bernard Shaw, on Valen-tine's Day — and she'll do it in jail if President Carter doesn't commute her seven-year sentence this fall. Shaw was one of 20 bodyguards who shadowed Miss Hearst when she was free on $1.5 million hail pending appeal of her hank robbery conviction. She says he asked her to marry him before she returned to her cell in May. She's up for parole in July.

Four writers were inducted into the Nashville Songwriters Hall of Fame during the group's annual banquet Sunday night. Honored by their peers were Tom T. Hall, Hank Snow, Don Wayne and Joe Allison. Hall, a performer in his own right. is also one of the top songwriters in country music. A prolific writer, he has written such songs as,"Home-coming," "The Day that Clayton Delaney Died," "Harper Valley PTA," and "Old Dogs, Children and Watermelon Wine."

In New York, British punk rock-er Sid Vicious remained in a Rikers Island detoxification center over the weekend while his former manager attempted to raise 350,000 necessary to free the musician on bail. Vicious, 21, is charged with the stahhing death of his girlfriend; where he was being treated for withdrawal symptoms from methadone. Vicious was a member of the spitting and stomping Sex Pistols until they broke up last winter. He is accused of fatally stabbing Nancy Spungen, 20, with a hunting knife Thursday in the couple's room at Manhattan's Cheisea -SAMUEL JUSTICE.
